The focus of Rich's legal advice is on understanding your business, your industry, your goals, and where you headed in the future — and using that insight to solve challenges creatively and efficiently. Rich's unique technical and diverse legal experiences allow him to help clients "see around corners" and protect and exploit their assets in ways that fit within their evolving business plan and budget. Rich is a Chambers USA ranked and recommended patent attorney for his "reliable advice" and "customer-focused" approach. Rich is the Patent Practice Leader for ArentFox Schiff's IP group — more than 60 attorneys and IP professionals.

Rich's diverse practice and vast experience ranges in technology areas from mechanical, software, AI, semiconductors, ceramic materials, polymers, textiles, pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, medical devices, automotive, financial business methods, and fashion/footwear. Rich also provides counseling on trademark and copyright procurement and enforcement for a full 360° IP approach to your portfolio. In addition, Rich has handled hundreds of IP license, joint development, manufacturing and distribution agreements, and handled the IP due diligence in M&A transactions ranging in size from multiple millions to multiple billions of dollars. As a former packaging engineer and patent attorney at a leading cosmetic company, Rich has particular proficiency with issues involving packaging and materials engineering and understands the unique issues that in-house counsel are facing. Having also lived and worked in Japan, Rich understands that advice needs to also take cross-border issues into account.

All of this combined experience allows Rich to provide relevant present day advice that assists clients in moving forward.

Previous Work

Prior to joining ArentFox Schiff, Rich was a partner at Dickstein Shapiro.
